1 Picture of Moai

This weekend I went for a 5 mile walk on Saturday. I have a lot of things I am thinking about and processing and I felt like just walking around aimlessly would help remedy from my stress. On my walk I was able to notice lots of things around SLO I had never noticed before.

The first thing I ran into was a house with a lot of statues. It was somewhere along the highland neighborhood, but the garden was just filled with probably 10+ statues. The one that intrigued me the most was this Moai which was probably taller than me.

Later on my walk I walked downtown along Broad Street, which is a walk I've done before that always has a lot of interesting houses and architecture along it. Lots of a flowers, too. This one in particular stood out to me, as it has vines. I am hoping to eventually in the future get vines tattooed along my arm so I wanted to save this picture for reference.

The last picture I want to include are some very pretty flowers along my walk. This was on the way back from Broad Street, growing kinda near a house on Foothill Hospital.

I did not know about the `\listoffigures` command so this was cool to play with.
